"I axw the wedded, tady,
With the love-light on the brew,
And I heared the low breathed wallsper
Of the hely inverse vow;
And by the quick pulsation
In my bosom's immost core,
I knew the heart was throbbing
As it ne'er had throbbed before

"I saw the wedded, lady,
And my thoughts went roving back
To a bridal day which long ago,
Illumed lifes's sunny track;
When like thyself, I vowed to love,
Through weal and wo, for life,
And with the golden circlet claimed,
That sweetest name—a wife!

Ohl marvel not, if 'mid the smiles That graced thy nuptial hour,
Mine eyes were wet with bitter tears,
Which fell like summer shower;
It was not ency of thy lot,
Nor sorrow at thy bliss;

I would not thy cup of joy, One shining drop should miss.

"But oh! 'twas memery, Memory's power,
Which thus my spirit bowed,
I knelt again as once I knelt,
And vowed as once I vowed;
Methought I stood as thou didst stand,
The loved one by my side;
Then looked upon my darkened robes,
The widowed, not the bride!

"Yet, lady, though my heart was sad.
As sad it off must be.
Heaven's best and holiest benison
"Twould stiff call down on the.
Joy to the bride! Love's brighest wreath
For these may true love twine,
And be thy wedded life as blest,
And oh! less brief than mine."

He only is worthy of esteem that ows what is just and honest, and dares to o it; that is master of his own passions and scorns to be a slave to another's. Such a one merits more respect than those gay things who own all their greatness and rea utation to their rentals and revenues
